CHIPS.

One more night of Pop.

There was very little activity at the police station yesterday.

Commercial drummers are numerous in the towns all along the railroad between Salt Lake and Frisco.

William Douglass, of Payson, has been suffering severely for a week past from erysipelas, but was much improved on Thursday.

Farmers in Utah County are busy plowing, planting and sowing. Much new ground is being brought under cultivation.

The Jay Rial company begins an engagement at the Salt Lake Theatre on Monday in Taken from Life. Everybody will wish to see what is taken.

The adjourned meeting of the Deseret Wing Shooting Club will be held this evening at 7 o'clock at the usual place. All members are requested to attend.

On account of the 8:30 a.m. train on the Utah Central having been taken off, passengers from the east for Salt Lake via the Union Pacific are delayed in Ogden one hour and a half.

Mr. George Cullins has come down from Alta and reports scarcely any change in the aspect of the place since the great disaster. Everything is buried in the snow. Nothing can be done till June 1st.

Yesterday morning Mayor Sharp took the Supervisor up on North Temple street and showed him the pits there in the road below Armstrong's mill. It is probable that the holes will now be filled up.

Stevens, the man who was arrested at the D. & R. G. depot on Wednesday, charged with stealing a pistol at P. V. Junction, was discharged by the judge yesterday as there was no evidence against him. The fellow who resisted the officers was fined $10.

Several other wagon owners were run in yesterday for camping on the streets, and were quite surprised to find themselves taxed by the judge. New signs would be a good thing. Many of the country people don't read newspapers, and therefore do not know the new regulation.

James L. Lucas, the greengrocer next door to George Margrets on First South street, made an assignment yesterday. He ascribes as the cause of his failure the backwardness of his debtors in paying their obligations, which made it impossible for him to meet his. The failure is of no commercial significance.

The Frontier Index, a bright weekly published at Thompson Falls, Montana, comes to hand with lots of news about the mines and miners of Coeur d'Alene. The Index is the amalgam of the following journals: The Chronicle, Herald, Ogden Freeman, Inter-Mountain, Daily Labor Union, Atlantic and Union Freeman.

Attention Supervisor!

You are no doubt aware, Mr. Supervisor, that without exception the most central and most important point of interest in this city is the Temple Block? If you grant this, will you not also grant that a point of so much attraction and importance ought not to be surrounded by a stable or by the refuse of a stable? Every tourist, traveler and enquirer who comes to this city goes straight to the Temple Block, and you can imagine the disgust and surprise with which they put their handkerchiefs to their noses when they get in the vicinity of all that official which besmears the street. Make an end of this public nuisance, Mr. Supervisor, just as quickly as possible, and let it be a final ending too. It would be better to begrime any other block in the city than that one, and if you succeed in cleansing it the whole population will not only bless you, but what is of equal importance, they will re-elect you.

BUST OF PREST. YOUNG.

A Fine Piece of Work By a Utah Boy.

For some time past Mr. H. J. Brown, of Logan, has been engaged in the modeling of a bust of the late President Brigham Young, and recently succeeded in securing an excellent plaster cast from the original model. This bust was brought to Salt Lake on Wednesday evening and on Thursday was open to private inspection at the late residence of the President and also in the private office of President Taylor. The work of the artist is of that peculiar character which, while at first sight it is not as desirable as a likeness as could be wished, yet the longer and the closer the inspection, the more is one impressed with the remarkable likeness which the artist has produced. Few persons other than artists comprehend the great difficulty that has been expressed not only by photographers, but of artists in a more exclusive sense, in the production of any likeness or portrait or bust that will strike a spectator because of its naturalness, of this remarkable man. These matters must necessarily be taken into consideration in discussing the merits of a bust or portrait of the great subject, as they arise not only from facial peculiarities of President Young, but are materially augmented by the wonderful variety of expression of which his countenance was ever capable. So great were these changes that those who knew him best, who have studied the features most attentively, declared it was almost an impossibility to give a fair representation of a face and expression that was as ever-changing as the shade cast by a tree in the sunshine. However, the features are as nearly perfect as possible to make them. His family and those who knew the great man in life most intimately declare the artist has given his features with a fidelity that shows a genius for the expression of artistic truths. In the mouth, the set and determined chin, the broad and commanding forehead, the nose, the hair, the beard, the heavy, even powerful shoulders an improvement can be suggested by those to whom he was nearest and dearest. Of the manifold photographs of President Young that have been taken, not one tells the full story of his countenance or expression. The artist has followed none in particular, but under suggestions from faithful, knowing and loving eyes, the best parts have been taken from all and commingled into a harmony that is happy and powerful in the extreme. On this account a comparison between the chosen phase of the subject and the work of the sculptor is impossible; but with the higher ambition and instinct of the genuine artist he has sought for that which was most truthful and most notable and has then conscientiously given expression to those features in the plaster cast.

It is more than life size, and we do not believe that the work of Mr. Brown has been surpassed or even equalled in all the attempts that have been made heretofore. Mr. Brown is a young man, a resident of Logan, and shows the artist in everything. He has had a brief experience in Boston, but unable to prosecute his studies as far as desirable under the favorable circumstances offered in that great city returned home and has continued his studies under difficulties. Predicating upon the plaster cast above referred to and which will yet be shown to the public, if he had given no other evidence, we should be forced to the admission that Mr. Brown has unquestioned talent, and that he has chosen the pursuit for which, above all others in life, nature has justified and endowed him. It is probable Mr. Brown will be given an order for a host of copies of the subject; the cast in marble is for the Brigham Young College of Logan.

The bust will be on exhibition in Savage's Art Bazar to-day.

Mammoth Stock.

A small knot of spectators gathered in front of the London Bank yesterday at 1 o'clock, attracted thither by the voice of Mr. U. J. Wenner, who it appears was auctioning off several blocks of mammoth stock; the only bidders were Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Green, and the first bid was made by the latter gentleman at 50 cents; Mr. McIntyre raised it to $1; Mr. Green responded with $1.10; Mr. McIntyre jumped to $1.20; Mr. Green advanced to $1.25, at which price the larger block—2,500 shares—was knocked down to him. Inquiry from one of the parties concerned elicited the fact that the stock had been hypothecated to Mr. Green, who advertised it for sale and bought it in himself.

It is one of the peculiarities of the American people to devote all their time to business without regard to health. In this rush for money and fame, many lives are ruined, which, with proper attention and a timely use of a proper corrective could be saved. For this purpose there is nothing equal to the "Prickly Ash Bitters." It relieves the system of all impurities, purifies the blood, and, by assisting nature, restores original health and vigor.

A. M. Darke, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have been greatly benefited by Brown's Iron Bitters and can recommend it."

THE THEATRE.

Another Good House—The Play and Players.

When the miserable weather and the horrid streets are taken into consideration, the attendance at the Theatre yesterday evening cannot be considered as other than large, and the laughter and applause were as liberal as on the first night. There was a marked improvement in most of the features of the piece; Richmond played with greater ease and made his points with less apparent effort, and here we will state, in justice to that gentleman, that he had never played the part before Wednesday evening and had his first rehearsal of it on the stage that day. Considering this and the additional fact that he, like the rest of the company, had traveled without intermission since leaving Chicago, it cannot be denied that he is a "gritty" as well as a good comedian. He introduces several entirely new things and keeps the audience laughing continually. Mr. Gorman's voice is not yet completely restored, but he made a heap of fun for the audience and fully established himself in popular favor. The Dudes received a loud encore, and deserved it, the singing, walking and dressing being the nearest approach to that kind of thing we have yet seen on the stage. Of course Kate Castleton was as before the favorite; this winsome lady seems to grow in favor with each successive appearance, her Quaker song being as popular now as when first given here, over a year ago. Her style is one that is calculated to please anywhere and everywhere; she is not only attractive personally, but her deportment is captivating to the last degree.

Pop will be presented for the last time to-night. Those who desire an evening of real enjoyment would do well to be on hand in time.

No Deception About It.

Editors Herald:

Your correspondent, "Theatre G-er," was unjust yesterday in charging the Salt Lake Theatre with deception as to John Mackay's non-appearance here in the character of "Pop."

Had the management intended to deceive the public, would they have distributed 1,500 bills all over the city, with Mr. Gorman's name in the part of "Pop," instead of Mr. Mackay's?

The facts are simply these: Mr. Mackay, after starting west with the company, suddenly threw up his part in Chicago. Mr. Leavitt at once proceeded there to try and settle the difficulty. At the time the billing was done, Rice's advance agent could not tell what the result would be, but stated that either Mackay, Richmond or Gorman would play the part. Mr. Gorman had played it in Chicago, hence his name was put in the cast here. Up to the arrival of the train, one hour before opening, the Theatre management could not ascertain whether Mr. Mackay was with the company or not, although they had telegraphed for that information.

The show printing was "Pop's" stock in trade. Mr. Mackay's portrait formed a large part of that stock. It would be unfair to ask them to discard that stock, without notice, because Mr. Mackay had suddenly thrown up his part, which after all might have only been for a day or two. Suppose that Mr. Mackay had come with the company, as anticipated, and he had been unannounced, would that not have been unfair to the public and to all parties concerned?

Candidly, Mr. Editor, the management did not know whether Mr. Mackay would come or not, and they adopted the safer alternative of announcing Mr. Gorman instead of Mr. Mackay, so as to avoid deceiving the public.

CELESTIAL ELOPEMENT.

A Heathen Who Followed Christian Example.

A few days since Loo Sing, an amiable washerwoman of the Chinese male gender, was the happy and peaceful possessor of an almond-eyed daisy to whom he had been duly espoused by a Chinese priest in California. In an evil hour Wong Ling appeared on the scene, and by some spell which he exercised over the said daisy, estranged her affections from the devoted Loo and induced her to decamp with him and share his palace of one room in Ogden. They fled to Ogden, and poor Loo flew to the police station. Then these new fangled American tricks of electricity stepped in and completely upset the plans of the festive Wong Ling, by instructing the officers at Ogden to nab him on his arrival. Sergeant Calder was on his track by the morning train, and with vengeance gleaming from his eyes brought him back to the capital.

Justice Spies will try to solve the mystery connected with the affair to-day. Wong Ling languishes in jail; the almond-eyed daisy pines at her hotel in Ogden, and Loo is taking an overdose of opium to drown his sorrows. The heroine of the tragedy denies that she was Loo's wife, and claims that she had a perfect right to transfer her heart and hand to Wong or any other man. Meantime Wong is held on a charge of larceny for taking away Loo's trunk with the disputed female.

"Bonnie Kate."

That fascinating little lady and brilliant soubrette, Miss Kate Castleton, has been interviewed by a New York reporter, and tells how she made her success with her well known song: "Mr. Parke," said she, in mock distress, "can you not prevent some of these people imitating me? Here is a picture of somebody in my quaker costume, who has been singing 'For Goodness sake.' It is bad enough to be copied in everything I do. But, not content with that, they must have their portraits taken too. It is rather hard, I think. For myself, I claim to be original, at least, in what I do on the stage. Do you know," she continued, turning to the reporter, "most of my ideas come to me in the night, in bed. I lie and think, and think. All at once the right notion strikes me. I just turn it over in my mind once or twice, go to sleep, and in the morning I've got it. That song, 'For Goodness Sake Don't Say I Told You,' was first sung in a variety theatre, in lights. I heard it and saw that there was something in it. But after I had secured the song I could not make up my mind about the dress. I thought of every costume I had ever seen or heard of. Suddenly I hit upon the Quakers. That was what I wanted. The gray cashmere and poke bonnet were just the thing. It was a 'go' from the first. In San Francisco they went wild over it. All the business I introduced—the walk, the skip and the sidelong glances—are my own. Of course, I have a host of imitators, and that is one reason why I want to drop it. As soon as everybody else has a thing I don't want it."

She then goes to tell about herself: "All I have to do is to act naturally, and that is all I attempt. I know very little about the stage. I was not brought up to the theater. I was born in Buckinghamshire, England, on Lord Castleton's estate, and in my childhood days I was scampering over the country on horseback with the Castleton boys. I was just a careless country girl, and had no more idea of going upon the stage than of flying. Then I went to London. My father is in business there. Well, I thought I would like to be a public singer, and, very much against the wishes of my parents, I made my debut at the Oxford Music Hall, in London."

"Taken From Life."

Mr. Henry Pettit's new play, "Taken From Life," was produced last night at the California Theatre, and made a decided success. The audience packed the theatre and the interest taken by them in following the story of the play enacted in many effective scenes, stamped the play as one that is likely to have a very long run at this house. Its story has a strong human interest, is well told—if a trifle diffuse in the leading dramatic features—and has many sympathetic touches of strong sentiment, and a current of comedy that brightens the whole, and is always in good taste and to the point. The play was on the whole excellently acted. Miss Louise Rial as the leading part, was well hit; also Mr. H. S. Walter Lee, the artist. Characters were well portrayed, and the scenery was beautiful and the mechanical effects new and cleverly worked, especially the explosion scene in the third act. —Exchanges. This clever company, so highly spoken of, will appear for three nights only, commencing on Monday evening next, April 21st, at the Salt Lake theatre, and any company Mr. Rial brings to Salt Lake, we can assure is only the best. Box office will open this morning, when reserved seats will be on sale, without extra charge.

I. D. Muller, St. Louis, Mo., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters gives perfect satisfaction to my customers."

ODD FELLOWS.

They Dedicate a New Hall and Elect New Officers.

The Odd Fellows' hall at Park City was dedicated on Monday evening last by the Grand Master, E. D. Hoge, who was attended by the principal officers of the Grand Lodge of Utah. After the ceremonies and a telling oration by Deputy Grand Master Pearce, a splendid banquet at the Park City Hotel was discussed by the Lodge. Tuesday was consumed with other important business, and on Wednesday morning the annual election took place, resulting as follows: Grand Master—Henry Cohn. Deputy Grand Master—Edward Pearce. Grand Warden—W. H. Turner. Grand Secretary—Louis Hyams. Grand Treasurer—L. L. Baumgarten. Grand Representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge—Edmund H. Murphy.

After recess the Lodge acted on several important resolutions, amendments, etc., after which the newly elected Grand officers were installed in their respective offices. The Grand Master appointed the following officers, who were duly installed into their respective stations:

G. F. Culmer, Grand Marshal. E. R. Clute, Grand Guardian. L. Cummings, Grand Conductor. S. J. Ascheim, Grand Herald. W. H. Harris, Grand Chaplain. John Buckle, D. D. G. Master of District No. 1. Joseph Sewell, D. D. G. Master of District No. 2. Daniel Bader, D. D. G. Master of District No. 3. D. N. Swan, D. D. G. Master of District No. 4. D. N. Swan, D. D. G. Master of District No. 5.

Thus completing a most satisfactory session, the Grand Lodge adjourned to meet in Salt Lake City on the third Tuesday in April, 1885.

A reporter dropped in at the old Dwyer stand yesterday, and found the sale still going on at the sacrifice figure; all the goods from the several warehouses have been emptied into the front store, and the shelves and counters now seem almost as well stocked as on the day of the assignment, notwithstanding that over $8,500 in merchandise has been disposed of.
